GRAF ZEPPELIN HEADING OUT ON ATLANTIC

FLYING SOUTH OF STORM AREA NEAR AZORES

FRONTAL WINDS ON SPANISH COAST REDUCED SPEED TO 30 MILES AN HOUR

AT 60 MILE AN HOUR SPEED MAY REACH NEW YORK SOME TIME SUNDAY NIGHT

(By United Press)

Horta, Azores, Oct. 12. — The Graf Zeppelin at 7 P. M. Greenwich time (2 P. M. EST) had passed the Azores to the south and was in latitude 37.43 north, longitude 33.43 west.

The zeppelin's position was approximately 33 miles southwest of the islands, showing that she was making excellent time from Madeira. She approximately was headed directly towards Bermuda. An increasingly strong westerly wind was blowing here and it was raining.

The Graf Zeppelin, flying from Friedrichshafen, Germany, to the United States, apparently was over the South Atlantic today, making her way to this country to the south of a storm area that was moving as far down as the Azores.

The zeppelin reported "all well" today but did not divulge her position. She was believed, however, to be headed across the Atlantic by way of Madeira.

The Western Union station at Horta, Azores, reported at 8:35 A. M. EST that the Graf Zeppelin had passed over Madeira. The report was not confirmed from other sources.

The British steamer Gymeric reported at 6 A. M. EST that she had sighted the Graf Zeppelin at 7 degrees west and 35 north. That is a point about 30 miles off the northwest coast of Africa and about 400 miles from Madeira.

The Graf Zeppelin apparently avoided passing directly over Gibraltar, but cut across the strait or tip of Africa to the south of it. At 12:20 A. M. she notified the Gibraltar wireless station that she was passing that vicinity, the wireless station at Lisbon announced.

The distance from Gibraltar to Funchal, Madeira, is 700 miles. Assuming that the Zeppelin was in the vicinity of Gibraltar at 12:20 A. M. EST, she would reach Madeira at 2:20 P. M. EST if her speed were 50 miles an hour.

The distance from Funchal to the United States is 3,183 miles. If the dirigible averages 60 miles an hour across the ocean, she should make the distance in 53 hours, putting her in New York Sunday afternoon or Sunday night.

Adverse winds might delay her until late Sunday night or early Monday morning.

(By United Press)

Pulling hard against head winds the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin, inaugurating the first trans-Atlantic air passenger service, headed out on the Atlantic today where more favorable flying weather will accelerate her speed.

As the Graf Zeppelin swung down the Spanish coast last night stiff frontal winds retarded her speed until at times, according to mileage computations, she could be making no better than 30 miles an hour.

But once she strikes the Atlantic, provided the southern route is followed, tail winds should aid her and some meteorologists believe the five-12-cylinder motors plus the wind will whip the speed of this new air queen to approximately 80 miles an hour.

That should put her over the Azores some time after midnight to-night with from 36 to 48 hours remaining to run before the silvery gray form is attached to the mooring mast at Lakehurst, N. J.

The Graf Zeppelin made a steady flight yesterday. Starting majestically from Friedrichshafen, her home base, at 1:52 A. M. (New York time) she cut directly to Switzerland, thence down France and then started down the eastern coast of Spain.

Over Barcelona she was sighted by a United Press correspondent. She had made the approximately 650 miles to Barcelona in 11 hours and 59 minutes.

From there on head winds apparently retarded the Graf Zeppelin. At 3:30 P. M. she passed over Tarragona and at 7 P. M. New York time, she had passed over Castellon.

Gibraltar still was 390 miles from Castellon and if the head winds re-

Two Cars Crash, Three Persons Fatally Injured

TWO KILLED WHEN PLANE TAILSPINS AND CRASHES TO GROUND

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 12. — (U.P.) — Rose Horvitz, 29, and Charles Mayer Hall, 26, commercial air pilot, were killed instantly when the plane in which they were riding went into a tail spin and crashed from an altitude of 2,400 feet. Both were thrown clear of the wreckage.

SHIPSTEAD DENIES ANY DEALS, WILL NOT MAKE ANY

INTERVIEWED REGARDING GOV.
ERNOR SMITH AND SENATOR'S FORCES

REPEATS HE HAS NO DESIRE TO RETURN TO SENATE ON ANOTHER'S COAT TAILS

Minneapolis, Oct. 12. — (U.P.) — Republican charges that Minnesota democrats and farmer-laborites had completed a "deal" in the interest of the Governor Smith-Senator Henrik Shipstead forces were denied again here by Shipstead.

"I have not made a political 'deal' and I will make none in the future," the farmer-labor candidate for reelection of the senate said. "I have never permitted any group or consideration to stand between me and what I consider my duty to the people of this state. I have no desire to return to the senate on the coat tails of some other candidate."

Shipstead's remarks were obviously aimed at charges that George Cashman, St. Cloud, democratic senatorial candidate, had withdrawn from the race in a "swap" for Shipstead's support of Smith.

Meanwhile at Fairmont, Governor Kristianson, campaigning for reelection reiterated that he had kept his promise to the citizens of Minnesota to hold down governmental state expenses. The governor also appealed again for the election of the entire state G. O. P. ticket.

At Windom, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, declared that Herbert Hoover was a student and deeply interested in the problems of the farmer, while Governor Smith's chief interest was in industrialism.

tarded her going to 30 miles an hour, 13 hours would be required before the Graf Zeppelin was out to sea. That would place the big craft at sea about 8 A. M. (New York time) this morning.

There are two courses open to the Graf Zeppelin if she decides to follow the southern route.

One would be direct to the Azores and thence upwards to Lakehurst, N. J. That course is 4,100 miles. The route would be to follow the great circle course which is about 200 miles north of the Azores, direct to Lakehurst, N. J. This course is 3,667 miles.

On an average of 60 miles an hour progress it would appear that the Graf Zeppelin could not reach New York by either route until some time Sunday night.

London, Oct. 12. — The Western Union station at Horta, Azores, reported at 8:35 A. M. EST that the Graf Zeppelin had just passed over Madeira.

Washington, Oct. 12. — The Graf Zeppelin through Commander Charles P. Rosendahl, U. S. N., a passenger, asked the navy today for weather reports on its path across the Atlantic.

Hickman Faces Execution Within Week From Today, To Die Friday, Oct. 19 on Gallows

FOR KIDNAPING AND MURDER OF SCHOOL GIRL

FATHER IS MAKING A LAST ATTEMPT TO SAVE WAYWARD SON

SON'S BODY NOT TO BE BROUGHT TO EL PASO FOR BURIAL

By RONALD W. WAGONER

(United Press Staff Correspondent) San Quentin Prison, Calif., Oct. 12. — One week from today William Edward Hickman will have left the large wooden "condemned cage" on the third floor of San Quentin prison's old execution building.

Less than 25 feet from the cage, through a tiny wooden door, is the white-walled death chamber in the center of which stands the pale-green gallows on which Hickman is to die Friday, Oct. 19, for the kidnapping and murder of Marion Parker, daughter of a Los Angeles banker.

Next Wednesday night after the other inmates of the huge prison overlooking San Francisco Bay have retired, Hickman will be taken from the cell he has occupied in "death row" since April to the barren attic-like room where the doomed man spent two nights and a day before execution.

The march of some 300 yards from the prison building where Hickman and Russell St. Clair Bietzel, young slayer of his sweetheart, Barbara Hauger, Los Angeles, occupy death cell No. 20, will take Hickman to the open air for the last time.

From the cell house to the attic behind the death chamber, Hickman and his guards will walk a cement pathway through San Quentin's flower garden with its artistic fountains.

Turning to the left, the party will pass up a cluttered alleyway to the foot of a high stairway. Up 75 stairs to a platform, where Hickman may, if he chooses, gaze into the distant lights of cottages on the Marine county hillside.

Turning into a doorway, the young slayer will be guided to one of the two wooden cages. Here slats replace the bars to which he has been accustomed. A chair, a table and a bed are the furniture.

Perhaps, if Hickman requests it, Warden James Holchan will permit him to have the phonograph with which he passed away many hours in the death house.

Hundreds of stories are told on the slats of the death cage if Hickman cares to read.

For about a half century men have passed in and out of those cages, leaving behind on the slats a penciled record of their stay. One finds the rough scribbles of untutored and the fine handwriting of the educated, but each penciling tells the same grim story.

LUXURIOUS SPEAKEASY OF CHICAGO BOMBED

Chicago, Oct. 12. — (U.P.) — "The 101" a speakeasy on the lower level of Wacker drive dealing exclusively in pre-war rums, Irish whiskeys and old wines, was bombed today by two men who hurled a bundle of dynamite through the front passageway. Detectives said they assumed the speakeasy was bombed because its owners specialized in high grade liquor, refusing to buy local products from the beer and alcohol syndicates.

HOOVER AND MANAGERS FACE DELICATE PROBLEM

INVOLVES DATE OF CANDIDATE'S DEPARTURE FOR CALIFORNIA

HOOVER TO CAST HIS BALLOT; SHALL HE LEAVE EARLY OR LATE

By THOMAS L. STOKES

(United Press Staff Correspondent) Washington, Oct. 12. — Herbert Hoover and his managers are facing a delicate problem in campaign strategy involving the date of the republican candidate's departure for California to cast his ballot.

The problem is whether it is more important for Hoover to leave early so he may visit "doubtful" states on his way west, thus leaving the eastern field open to Governor Alfred E. Smith in the last few days, or to remain here as late as possible for any last-minute developments and eliminate western stops.

SINCLAIR SUMMONED AS A WITNESS IN PROHIBITION TRIAL

New York, Oct. 12. — (U.P.) — Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil man, has been subpoenaed by the government as a witness in the trial of Prohibition Agents Elmer F. Brown and Edward Andrews, who are charged with accepting a $10,000 bribe from Sinclair's attorneys.

before, each taking its nick from the old board.

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 12. — Thomas Hickman, father of William Edward Hickman, is leaving here tomorrow for California to appear before Gov. Young in a last attempt to save the son from the gallows, he said.

The elder Hickman expressed the opinion that his appearance before the governor would do little good. "But," he added, "I must do this last thing for Edward."

Hickman said that the son's body would not be brought to El Paso for burial as "I don't know how long I will live here."

ACCIDENT OCCURRED NEAR FOREST LAKE

REV. T. T. ROWAN REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN ALMOST INSTANTLY KILLED

DRIVERS CONFUSED WHEN VISION BLOCKED BY TRUCK FROM SIDE ROAD

St. Paul, Oct. 12. — (U.P.) — Three persons from Cloquet, Minn., including the Rev. T. T. Rowan, were fatally injured near Forest Lake today and another man was injured when two automobiles crashed head-on.

The dead were:

The Rev. Rowan.
R. Skagelberg, owner of the Auto Supply Company, Cloquet, driver of one car.

Charles Lindell.
Allen Cook, the fourth member of the Skagelberg party, was injured.

John Fortner and Miss Fern Zimmerman, both of whom were also from Cloquet, occupants of the second car, were uninjured. Miss Zimmerman is a school teacher.

The Rev. Rowan was reported almost instantly killed when the cars driven by Skagelberg and Fortner collided. The drivers were said to have become confused when their vision was blocked by a truck which emerged from a side road.

Skagelberg died 15 minutes after the accident in Bethesda Hospital here and Lindell followed a short time later.

Forest Lake, Oct. 12. — The Rev. T. P. Rowan and R. Skagelberg, both of Cloquet were killed and two other men from the same town were injured, when their automobile crashed with another car near here today.

The Rev. Gowan was reported almost instantly killed and Skagelberg, owner of the Auto Supply Company, Cloquet, died shortly after the accident in a St. Paul hospital.

Charles Lindell was taken in an unconscious condition to Bethesda hospital, St. Paul, where he died a short time later. Allen Cook was less seriously injured.

The other car was driven by John Fortner, who with Miss Fern Zimmerman, his passenger, escaped injury. Fortner and Miss Zimmerman are, by a strange coincidence also of Cloquet, where the latter is engaged as a school teacher.

HOOVER POLLS A GOOD VOTE IN DIXIE LAND

LITERARY DIGEST POLL NOW
GIVES RETURNS ON 2,000,000 VOTES

SEPARATE POLL IS MADE OF
THREE MAJOR CITIES, DEMOCRATS GAIN

Smith reduces Hoover's lead more than 7 per cent as the first major returns are reported from the South and several larger cities in the fourth week's returns of The Literary Digest's 19,000,000-ballot Presidential Poll published today.

With the votes now received from thirty-nine of the forty-eight states, Hoover has 1,201,869 votes of a grand total of 1,911,257 tabulated, while Smith polls 688,829. This gives Hoover approximately 63 per cent and Smith about 36 per cent of the total vote as compared to the previous week's tabulation when the percentages were nearly 68 for Hoover and 31 for Smith.

A new feature of the mammoth "postcard election" is the introduction of separate urban returns, included in the total, from Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, where the entire electorate is being polled which show Smith leading in these three cities with 185,000 votes to Hoover's 177,404.

Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina are the only states that have as yet given Smith a plurality. Though Hoover has a slight advantage in the present returns in Alabama, the vote is practically a stand-off.

Virginia and North Carolina give Hoover a definite lead but the returns from the south, The Literary Digest cautions, are less than half completed and should not be taken as indicative of the final returns.

The first separate returns from New York City, reported this week, give Smith 102,539 votes as against 65,295 for Hoover. Almost 30 per cent of those voting for Smith here report that they voted the republican ticket in 1924, while Hoover gains less than 15 per cent from the democratic ranks of four years past in the same city.

In New York state as a whole, where it is stated that the returns are more nearly complete, Hoover is leading by 170,113 to 144,276. This ratio may be reduced next week. The Literary Digest points out, when more votes will be reported from New York City.

A tabulation of "how the same voters voted in 1924" shows that Smith receives nearly one-half of his support from those who voted for the republican candidate four years ago, a slight decrease from last week when over one-half of his vote was from republicans.

Over 76 per cent of Hoover's vote comes from professed republicans at the last election and about 23 per cent of his strength is coming from those who state they voted the democratic ticket in 1924.

Hoover, it is shown, is receiving more than one-half of his support from the democratic ranks in the states of Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas.

Of the 306,987 participating in this "straw poll" who did not vote in 1924, which includes both those who have since arrived at voting age and others who failed to vote their previous political allegiance, over 68 per cent are voting for Hoover and 39 per cent are marking their ballots for Smith.

"Previous polling records for the fourth week of a national poll, set by The Literary Digest's Presidential poll of 1924," The Literary Digest states editorially, "are left far behind with this week's tabulation of nearly 2,000,000 votes from thirty-nine of the forty-eight states. The present tabulation shows an increase of almost half a million votes over the fourth week of the 1924 poll, or practically 33 per cent."

"In fact, no Literary Digest poll has ever stirred such wide-spread interest both among the daily newspapers throughout the country and also, judging by the mass of private correspondence daily received, among the individual voters themselves.

"Votes from the states in the 'solid south' and from New York City appear for the first time in considerable numbers in this week's tabulation, with the result that the Hoover majority is somewhat reduced. The republican lead of more than two-to-one in last week's tabulation is cut down to less than two-to-one this time.

"The breaking down of political fences, already noticed in previous reports on the poll, is even more plainly evident as voters from the southern states come in. Alabama shows the republican candidate slightly in the lead, supported by far more former democrats than republicans. While the vote here is practically a stand-off, both Virginia and North Carolina give Mr. Hoover a substantial lead.

"Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina are the only states, thus far, which have registered a preference for the democratic candidate. In all of the southern states, however, considering the fact that the poll is at present not more than half completed, the vote can hardly be taken as closely indicative of the final returns.

"The Digest's present totals, it will be noticed, show that 160,386 democratic votes are now in the Hoover column, while Mr. Smith claims the considerably larger figure of 259,913 votes from republican voters as of 1924. On the other hand under the total of the column headed 'No Vote,' which includes those who vote for the first time in this election, and those who neglect to state whether they voted or not, Mr. Hoover has the advantage by 180,102 to 119,754 for Smith.

"In the final analysis, of course, the majorities in the separate states expressed through the votes in the electoral college will determine the election."

SWEEPS INTO MIDWEST FROM

TODAY

SNOW, HAIL AND HIGH WINDS
ENVELOP PLAINS AND MOUNTAINS

Chicago, Oct. 12. (U.P.) — The first breath of winter was sweeping into the midwest today from the slopes of Alaska.

Snow, hail and high winds already have enveloped the western plains and Rocky Mountain states. The weather bureau here predicted that by the time the football teams kick off for Saturday's games, the temperatures in this region will have dropped to from 40 degrees to below freezing.

The mercury is due to skid rapidly in Chicago from a record high of 87.2 degrees for Oct. 11. At 1 A. M. today the temperature was 72 degrees but by dawn it had begun to fall slowly at first.

Snow fell in Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota.

Hail storms leveled corn fields and damaged small buildings in Nebraska.

The weather bureau said that the cold wave started down from the Alaskan wastes more than a week ago.

COAST GUARD CUTTER THOUGHT LOST WITH CREW

San Francisco, Oct. 12. (U.P.) — The coast guard cutter Smith, with 13 men aboard, was believed lost today off Point Arena after being caught and badly damaged in a terrific gale Thursday.

A radio message from the craft at 9:30 p. m. last night said the craft was in distress and sinking. An SOS was sent to all coast guard cutters in northern waters at that hour.

Until midnight, intermittent radio communication was kept up with the distressed ship. After that, no more radio messages were received.

Coast guard officers here expressed the fear that the vessel had gone down.

HOOVER POLLS A GOOD VOTE IN DIXIE LAND

LITERARY DIGEST POLL NOW
GIVES RETURNS ON 2,000,000
VOTES

SEPARATE POLL IS MADE OF
THREE MAJOR CITIES, DEMOCRATS
GAIN

Smith reduces Hoover's lead more than 7 per cent as the first major returns are reported from the South and several larger cities in the fourth week's returns of The Literary Digest's 19,000,000-ballot Presidential Poll published today.

With the votes now received from thirty-nine of the forty-eight states, Hoover has 1,201,869 votes of a grand total of 1,911,257 tabulated, while Smith polls 688,829. This gives Hoover approximately 63 per cent and Smith about 36 per cent of the total vote as compared to the previous week's tabulation when the percentages were nearly 68 for Hoover and 31 for Smith.

A new feature of the mammoth "postcard election" is the introduction of separate urban returns, included in the total, from Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, where the entire electorate is being polled which show Smith leading in these three cities with 185,000 votes to Hoover's 177,404.

Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina are the only states that have as yet given Smith a plurality. Though Hoover has a slight advantage in the present returns in Alabama, the vote is practically a stand-off.

Virginia and North Carolina give Hoover a definite lead but the returns from the south, The Literary Digest cautions, are less than half completed and should not be taken as indicative of the final returns.

The first separate returns from New York City, reported this week, give Smith 102,539 votes as against 65,205 for Hoover. Almost 30 per cent of those voting for Smith here report that they voted the republican ticket in 1924, while Hoover gains less than 15 per cent from the democratic ranks of four years past in the same city.

In New York state as a whole, where it is stated that the returns are more nearly complete, Hoover is leading by 179,113 to 144,276. This ratio may be reduced next week. The Literary Digest points out, when more votes will be reported from New York City.

A tabulation of "how the same voters voted in 1924" shows that Smith receives nearly one-half of his support from those who voted for the republican candidate four years ago, a slight decrease from last week when over one-half of his vote was from republicans.

Over 76 per cent of Hoover's vote comes from professed republicans at the last election and about 23 per cent of his strength is coming from those who state they voted the democratic ticket in 1924.

Hoover, it is shown, is receiving more than one-half of his support from the democratic ranks in the states of Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas.

Of the 306,987 participating in this "straw poll" who did not vote in 1924, which includes both those who have since arrived at voting age and others who failed to note their previous political allegiance, over 58 per cent are voting for Hoover and 39 per cent are marking their ballots for Smith.

"Previous polling records for the fourth week of a national poll, set by The Literary Digest's Presidential poll of 1924," The Literary Digest states editorially, "are left far behind with this week's tabulation of nearly 2,000,000 votes from thirty-nine of the forty-eight states. The present tabulation shows an increase of almost half a million votes over the fourth week of the 1924 poll, or practically 33 per cent."

In fact, no Literary Digest poll has ever stirred such wide-spread in-

ACCIDENT OCCURRED NEAR FOREST LAKE

REV. T. T. ROWAN REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN ALMOST INSTANTLY KILLED

DRIVERS CONFUSED WHEN VI-SION BLOCKED BY TRUCK
FROM SIDE ROAD

St. Paul, Oct. 12. (U.P.) — Three persons from Cloquet, Minn., including the Rev. T. T. Rowan, were fatally injured near Forest Lake today and another man was injured when two automobiles crashed head-on.

The dead were:

The Rev. Rowan.
R. Skagelberg, owner of the Auto Supply Company, Cloquet, driver of one car.

Charles Lindell.

Allen Cook, the fourth member of the Skagelberg party, was injured. John Fortner and Miss Fern Zimmerman, both of whom were also from Cloquet, occupants of the second car, were uninjured. Miss Zimmerman is a school teacher.

The Rev. Rowan was reported almost instantly killed when the cars driven by Skagelberg and Fortner collided. The drivers were said to have become confused when their vision was blocked by a truck which emerged from a side road.

Skagelberg died 15 minutes after the accident in Bethesda Hospital here and Lindell followed a short time later.

Forest Lake, Oct. 12. — The Rev. T. T. Rowan and R. Skagelberg, both of Cloquet were killed and two other men from the same town were injured, when their automobile crashed with another car near here today.

The Rev. Gowan was reported almost instantly killed and Skagelberg, owner of the Auto Supply Company, Cloquet, died shortly after the accident in a St. Paul hospital.

Charles Lindell was taken in an unconscious condition to Bethesda hospital, St. Paul, where he died a short time later. Allen Cook was less seriously injured.

The other car was driven by John Fortner, who with Miss Fern Zimmerman, his passenger, escaped injury. Fortner and Miss Zimmerman are, by a strange coincidence also of Cloquet, where the latter is engaged as a school teacher.

Interest both among the daily newspapers throughout the country and also, judging by the mass of private correspondence daily received, among the individual voters themselves.

"Votes from the states in the 'solid south' and from New York City appear for the first time in considerable numbers in this week's tabulation, with the result that the Hoover majority is somewhat reduced. The republican lead of more than two-to-one in last week's tabulation is cut down to less than two-to-one this time."

"The breaking down of political fences, already noticed in previous reports on the poll, is even more plainly evident as voters from the southern states come in. Alabama shows the republican candidate slightly in the lead, supported by far more former democrats than republicans. While the vote here is practically a stand-off, both Virginia and North Carolina give Mr. Hoover a substantial lead."

"Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina are the only states, thus far, which have registered a preference for the democratic candidate. In all of the southern states, however, considering the fact that the poll is at present not more than half completed, the vote can hardly be taken as closely indicative of the final returns."

"The Digest's present totals, it will be noticed, show that 160,386 democratic votes are now in the Hoover column, while Mr. Smith claims the considerably larger figure of 259,913 votes from republican voters as of 1924. On the other hand under the total of the column headed 'No Vote,' which includes those who vote for the first time in this election, and those who neglect to state whether they voted or not, Mr. Hoover has the advantage by 180,102 to 119,754 for Smith."

"In the final analysis, of course, the majorities in the separate states expressed through the votes in the electoral college will determine the election."

WHERE SEVENTEEN PRISONERS PERISHED IN FIRE

Ruins of the Ohio State Penitentiary brick plant dormitory at Junction City, O., in which seven prisoners were burned to death and several others were injured when the building was recently razed by fire. In that almost 300 prisoners were helped to safety by guards, Deputy Warden H. C. Blosser attributed the fatalities to the victims' attempts to gather up their belongings when the fire alarm was given.

ORE COMPANY GETS $476,664 VERDICT

Federal District Court Jury at Duluth Returns Verdict Favoring Marquette Ore Co.

INVOLVED LAND IN COUNTY

Plaintiff Alleged Misrepresentation of Ore Bodies Leased by North Range Iron Co.

Duluth, Oct. 12.—A jury verdict for $476,664.98 in favor of the plaintiff was returned Thursday night by a federal district jury in the $1,500,000 iron ore land lease damage suit. The verdict was returned by a jury at 8:20 p. m. after a deliberation of 4 hours and 50 minutes and is one of the largest verdicts made in federal court here. The suit was that of the Marquette Ore company against the North Range Iron company and Robert M. Adams and Ward Ames of Duluth, officers, and involved iron ore land in Crow Wing county. The jury held the North Range Iron company and Mr. Adams liable for the damages and at the same time returned a verdict for the defendant Ames releasing him of any responsibility.

D. R. McLennan, Lake Forest, Ill., an officer of the firm, was a defendant in the original suit filed but not a defendant in this suit. Mr. McLennan was left out of the case by a technicality. When papers were being served on the defendants, officials did not get service on Mr. McLennan, he being out of the jurisdiction of this court. Mr. McLennan, however, was a witness in the case. The Marquette Ore company charged that the defendants misrepresented the conditions as to the nature and extent of ore bodies leased by them.

The case lasted 32 days, starting Sept. 11. Judge William A. Cant of Duluth heard the testimony. The verdict was reported by Joseph N. Nolan who was selected as foreman.

THE FORGOTTEN AMENDMENT

WHEN the voters pick up their stack of ballots on November 6 they will be confronted by one amendment to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota, about which most of them probably will know very little, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

In the noise and confusion of more exciting political contests this measure has largely been overlooked.

It is Amendment No. 2 which gives the Legislature full authority to fix the liability of stockholders in all Minnesota corporations except those engaged in "manufacturing or mechanical business." Its object is to remove the double liability provision of the constitution.

Because of this provision of the constitution many companies organize in Delaware, New Jersey or some other state where the corporation laws are not so rigid. Minnesota is almost alone among the states of the union in having such a constitutional provision and it is costing the state no little revenue in corporation fees.

The public very properly may delegate authority in such matters to the Legislature, as provided in Amendment No. 2. The amendment should be adopted.

INDIAN SUMMER

INDIAN summer, it seems, was devised to give a man his last chance to put up his storm windows and doors, to get his coal, to buy his winter vegetables, to buy winter clothing, etc., and to "get set" for the winter that is just around the corner.

However, when Indian summer produces a brand like that of the last few days, one's mind reverts to real summer for we had as high as 85 degrees above recorded. Sweating from every pore, no fat man was able to concentrate on winter but had all his gray matter engrossed meeting the present torrid wave.

We are not grumbling about the weather in this banana belt. We consider Brainerd and the Lake Region have the finest climate in the world.

Our friends in Florida face hurricanes periodically and are oftentimes blown from their places of abode.

Our friends to the west in California are shaken from their domicile at stated periods. Clocks stop, dishes rattle from the shelves, as minor disturbances shimmy their way over the earth's surface out there. Many of these are never reported in the newspaper.

A GREAT JUDGE

JUSTICE HOLMES has established an age record for the United States Supreme court, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Previously Judge Taney had been the oldest man on the Supreme bench, having died at 87 years, 6 months and 27 days. Judge Holmes passed that record last Friday.

It is not, however, for this that Justice Holmes will have won distinction. Had he been on the Supreme bench much less than the 26 years through which he has served upon that great tribunal, he would have set an unique record for high service. No other Supreme justice has been more unfaltering in his devotion to the Constitution; no other has more courageously resisted the tendency to make the law suit the time. If for nothing else, Justice Holmes has won the everlasting gratitude of the American people for dissenting always from every attempt made to abrogate the guarantees of the bill of rights. Free speech is to him a last ditch beyond which he cannot be driven. The right to peaceable assembly is to him sacred. His protests against unlawful search and seizure have rung out of our heedless clamor for this and that sumptuary law as did old Liberty bell itself when freedom was proclaimed.

WHICH SHALL IT BE?

THE question before the American farmer today is whether he would rather trust Herbert Hoover, with his undisputed genius for solving great problems; with his wonderful record in the reorganization of industry, and with his firm belief in the benefits of tariff protection, or Alfred Smith, with no experience in economic problems; with no knowledge of organization except in political affairs as manipulated by Tammany, and with a personal and party record of hostility to tariff protection to the end that the prices of food could be kept low for the benefit of those who dwell in the industrial East? With Mr. Hoover's record of never having failed in any task he undertook, and with Mr. Smith's record of having no other experience than that of New York politics, the answer ought not to be difficult to arrive at.—Rock County Herald.

EXTENDING TRADE AREA

MINNEAPOLIS merchants, a number of them, are reported extending their trade area by offering the best of their mail order customers the privilege of charge accounts. This, no doubt, is done after their own examination of credits and standing of such customers.

It evidences in another way the business competition that the local merchant faces.

It brings to mind what we consider a generally accepted axiom in business, that business comes to him who goes out after it.

YOU can go a long ways without finding a town that was built up by peddlers, says an exchange. Yes, and your speedometer will register about the same distance in quest of a town that was built up by business men, who insist upon sending their printing out of town in preference to giving it to the local publisher, adds the Dodge County Republican.

J. F. REED has finally landed where he started out to land a year ago—plumb into the democratic party. He should have resigned from the Farm Bureau Federation long ago. His continued political activity, he not having had much if any other activity the past twelve or fifteen months, has done the Farm Bureau great injury.—Long Prairie Leader.

GENERALLY speaking, all the man on the street cares about the tariff is that under Republican tariff he has a job and under Democratic tariff he hasn't a job.—Martin County Independent.

An Invitation to Hoover Supporters

A sincere, nation-wide effort is being made to get away from even the implication of an obligation which may be associated with the solicitation of large sums of money for discharging the expenses of a Presidential campaign. There has for many years been a growing feeling that the holder of the highest office within the gift of the Republic should owe his position solely and singly to the people whom he is chosen to serve. This sentiment has crystallized this year in the effort sponsored by the National Central Committee known as the Hoover Popular Subscription Fund, of which, in this state, J. F. Gould is director, working in conjunction with Hon. Ray Kern of Lake Elmo as chairman and Rudolph Lee of Long Prairie as Treasurer.

This organization has sought to create in every county of the state a working force to bring before the people an invitation to contribute $1 to the national campaign in furtherance of the ideal here briefly stated. That canvass has been made, or is in progress with more or less intensity throughout the state, but even where it is most energetically prosecuted great numbers of Hoover supporters will be missed. To those who have not been approached this article is directed and it is earnestly hoped that they will take it as a personal invitation to make the contribution suggested, or a larger or smaller amount, as they may desire, for the purpose of electing a truly people's candidate for President.

Fill out the coupon below fully and plainly so the National Committee may return to you a receipt by mail, enclose it with your check or currency and leave at the office of this newspaper or send direct by mail to J. F. Gould, 332 West Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn.

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgeslow

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Fenimore Wilde, famous Broadway actor, dies, his young and pretty daughter, Janet, obtains a job with John Montague, theatrical impresario, while her brother, Frank, an idler, goes South. Janet makes friends with Leonard Quigg, a temperamental musician who loves her, and Dr. David Churchill. When Montague insults her, Janet becomes Dr. Churchill's secretary. He tells her he is in love with her and contemplates divorcing his wife, so Janet gives up her position and goes to live with Chester Quigg, Leonard's artist uncle, and his charming little daughter, Alice. She learns how to placate old Mrs. Quigg, Chester's mother, and generally makes life pleasant for the Quiggs. Her brother, Frank, returns home broke and in debt, and accepts $1,000 from Leonard, secretly. In the meantime Janet quarrels with Leonard, and Frank admits he has borrowed money from Leonard. He introduces Janet to little Cora Niles, his sweetheart. John Montague dies and leaves Janet a $2,000,000 legacy. Leonard implies that Janet was Montague's mistress, and when he sends a note of apology Janet tears it up. A few days later Janet receives a visit from Wyndham Stonor, famous English playwright, who has known her father. He flirts with her and kisses her on the cheek.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

LEONARD QUIGG drove out to Cos Cob for the first week end after the family had taken up its quarters there. Janet met him as though nothing had happened.

"I have such a treat for you," she said as she shook hands warmly with him in the most cordial way possible—to annoy him.

"Lobster?" he suggested greedily.

"Something much nicer!" Janet held forth hopefully. "Your dear grandmother is back with us. You will never believe it, but she quarrelled with her friends, and so we have her for the Summer."

They were standing on the porch, and Leonard was leaning on the rail.

"Before we go in," he stipulated, "is it clear that I didn't mean a word that I said? I mean about your legacy. I was a fool."

"Naturally," Janet said brightly. Maliciously she began to hum the jazz melody that Leonard had composed on the inspiration of his rage.

"What did you do with that, Leonard? It's a terribly catchy tune."

"The publishers took it," he admitted cheerfully. "I shall probably make a lot of money on that."

Janet's laughter was genuine. "You make money out of a quarrel we had!" she mocked him. "Leonard, what an artist! Typical! The same spirit that makes a poet write verses about the death of his loved one—and then go out and sell them. Wyndham Stonor is right! You are all of you impossible!"

"Stonor?" he asked jealously. "The playwright? That tailor's dummy? Do you know him?"

"I suppose I know him," Janet said mischievously. "If a man tries to kiss a girl, I suppose the girl can say she knows him?" She paused, and then added: "I like him enormously, because he is not the least arty."

And as though she had staged it, as though the effect had been carefully timed and rehearsed to the moment, at that particular moment, a low-slung, expensive car, glis-

tening in cream and silver, turned from the road into the driveway, while at the wheel, immaculate in white flannels, sat Mr. Wyndham Stonor, his highly-polished monocle gleaming in the sunshine.

"Ain't he pretty?" growled Leonard, who was dressed in a worn and dusty suit of badly-fitting gray flannel.

Chester Quigg came hurrying out. While wealth or social importance meant nothing to him, he was always accused by his little daughter of being "a celebrity snob." At least, he greeted the celebrated playwright, whom he had met before, with the greatest cordiality.

"Come for the week-end I hope," Chester called out hospitably. "Leonard, take Mr. Stonor's suitcase."

"Frightfully kind of you," Wyndham answered as he got out of his car. "But I've not come to inflict myself for the week-end. Staying with people near here—Frederick Leppitz and his Missus—and I thought I'd pop over and say 'Howdy.'"

He took Janet's hand and kissed it lingeringly, while Leonard's fists clenched involuntarily, and Janet's smile of welcome, carefully assumed to torture Leonard, hinted at a hundred things.

"I think I will go and talk to the old lady," Leonard growled, walking off conscious of the fact that the others had not even heard him.

"I brought my bathing suit with me," Wyndham announced. "It's as hot as June. Are you coming in with me?" he asked Janet.

Chester welcomed the idea and shouted for Alice and Leonard, and presently all of them made their way to the little boathouse and pier which jutted out from the beach. Janet was charming in a swimming suit of green silk, while Wyndham's blue and white costume looked as though it had been specially tailored for him. Leonard shuffled down in a dirty pair of sneakers and an ancient blue worsted garment so big that it hung in flaps. Over it, he had donned an old raincoat that had been left by the people who owned the house. Alice ran ahead with the Critic, and Janet sighed as she noticed again how thin the child was.

Wyndham climbed to the diving board.

"I hope he breaks his neck—the fool!" Leonard whispered savagely to Janet.

"He will dive perfectly," Janet comforted him.

Despite the warmth of the sun, the water was cold, and none of them stayed long. Janet hurried Alice back to the house, as she was complaining of a pain in her ear.

Wyndham Stonor was careful to leave before anyone could be tired of him. He refused an invitation to stay to dinner, pleading that it would be rude to the Leppitzs.

"But after dinner they're going to some country club," he suggested to Janet. "If you are in a charitable mood, may I call for you and take you there to dance?"

Leonard was listening, so that Janet accepted instantly.

"I suppose we could all go?" she asked.

"Of course! It will be delightful," Wyndham smiled urbanely. He got into the expensive car and waved his hand as he slid noiselessly away.

"I don't want to go to the country club," Leonard said sulkily. "I did bring some clothes in case you wanted to go anywhere, but if we have to go with that ass—I'd rather not."

"Not to please me?" Janet coaxed him.

"Oh, all right then!" he agreed. But later that evening, as Alice was not feeling very well, and as Chester hated dancing, father and daughter arranged to stay at home. Mrs. Quigg protested vigorously at not being included in the party.

"Not that I am accustomed to associate with the common people you will meet at that club," she remarked bitterly. "Still, in these days, one may as well be democratic! I think it would amuse me—if I'm not so grudge a little diversion—to go with you, and I'm sure that Mr. Stonor would be delighted to have me."

But fortunately for Janet and Leonard, the old lady ate so heartily at dinner that she fell asleep immediately afterward, enabling them to slip away from the house without her knowing it.

Thoughtfully, and always choosing the correct car for the correct moment, Wyndham Stonor had called for them in a big limousine with a liveried chauffeur. And he was dressed faultlessly as usual.

Leonard was shabby in a very old tuxedo and a soft-fronted shirt. He looked so miserable as he glanced at the immaculate Stonor that something melted within Janet's heart.

So to Wyndham's intense secret astonishment, that evening was Leonard's, and Janet danced with him three times more than with the distinguished playwright.

Which, after all, had the charm of novelty for Mr. Wyndham Stonor!

tening in cream and silver, turned from the road into the driveway, while at the wheel, immaculate in white flannels, sat Mr. Wyndham Stonor, his highly-polished monocle gleaming in the sunshine.

"Ain't he pretty?" growled Leonard, who was dressed in a worn and dusty suit of badly-fitting gray flannel.

Chester Quigg came hurrying out. While wealth or social importance meant nothing to him, he was always accused by his little daughter of being "a celebrity snob." At least, he greeted the celebrated playwright, whom he had met before, with the greatest cordiality.

"Come for the week-end I hope," Chester called out hospitably. "Leonard, take Mr. Stonor's suitcase."

"Frightfully kind of you," Wyndham answered as he got out of his car. "But I've not come to inflict myself for the week-end. Staying with people near here—Frederick Leipzig and his Missus—and I thought I'd pop over and say 'Howdo.'"

He took Janet's hand and kissed it lingeringly, while Leonard's fists clenched involuntarily, and Janet's smile of welcome, carefully assumed to torture Leonard, hinted at a hundred things.

"I think I will go and talk to the old lady," Leonard growled, walking off conscious of the fact that the others had not even heard him.

"I brought my bathing suit with me," Wyndham announced. "It's as hot as June. Are you coming in with me?" he asked Janet.

Chester welcomed the idea and shouted for Alice and Leonard, and presently all of them made their way to the little boathouse and pier which jutted out from the beach. Janet was charming in a swimming suit of green silk, while Wyndham's blue and white costume looked as though it had been specially tailored for him. Leonard shuffled down in a dirty pair of sneakers and an ancient blue worsted garment so big that it hung in flaps. Over it, he had donned an old raincoat that had been left by the people who owned the house. Alice ran ahead with the Critic, and Janet sighed as she noticed again how thin the child was.

Wyndham climbed to the diving board.

"I hope he breaks his neck—the fool!" Leonard whispered savagely to Janet.

"He will dive perfectly," Janet comforted him.

Despite the warmth of the sun, the water was cold, and none of them stayed in long. Janet hurried Alice back to the house, as she was complaining of a pain in her ear.

Wyndham Stonor was careful to leave before anyone could be tired of him. He refused an invitation to stay to dinner, pleading that it would be rude to the Leipzigs.

"But after dinner they're going to some country club," he suggested to Janet. "If you are in a charitable mood, may I call for you and take you there to dance?"

Leonard was listening, so that Janet accepted instantly.

"I suppose we could all go?" she asked.

"Of course! It will be delightful," Wyndham smiled urbanely.

He got into the expensive car and waved his hand as he slid noiselessly away.

"I don't want to go to the country club," Leonard said sulkily. "I did bring some clothes in case you wanted to go anywhere, but if we have to go with that ass—I'd rather not."

"Not to please me?" Janet coaxed him.

"Oh, all right then," he agreed.

But later that evening, as Alice was not feeling very well, and as Chester hated dancing, father and daughter arranged to stay at home. Mrs. Quigg protested vigorously at not being included in the party.

"Not that I am accustomed to associate with the common people you will meet at that club," she remarked bitterly. "Still, in these days, one may as well be democratic! I think it would amuse me—if I'm not grudging a little diversion—to go with you, and I'm sure that Mr. Stonor would be delighted to have me."

But fortunately for Janet and Leonard, the old lady ate so heartily at dinner that she fell asleep immediately afterward, enabling them to slip away from the house without her knowing it.

Thoughtfully, and always choosing the correct car for the correct moment, Wyndham Stonor had called for them in a big limousine with a liveried chauffeur. And he was dressed faultlessly as usual.

Leonard was shabby in a very old tuxedo and a soft-fronted shirt. He looked so miserable as he glanced at the immaculate Stonor that something melted within Janet's heart.

So to Wyndham's intense secret astonishment, that evening, was Leonard's, and Janet danced with him three times more than with the distinguished playwright.

Which, after all, had the charm of novelty for Mr. Wyndham Stonor!

NAVY SWINGS INTO ACTION SATURDAY VS NOTRE DAME

MIDDLE WEST GAMES ARE TO BE CENTER OF INTEREST

THROUGH EXPECTED TO EXCEED ALL PREVIOUS GRIDIRON GATHERINGS

EIGHT "BIG TEN" TEAMS TO CLASH IN OPENING CONTESTS

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Chicago, Oct. 12. — (UP)—If it weren't for the weather, one would imagine that the climax, instead of the start, of the 1928 football season was at hand.

A throng which probably will exceed all previous gridiron gatherings will watch the Navy swing into action against Notre Dame tomorrow afternoon at Soldiers' Field.

The middle west will be a center of interest for the nation's football fans in more senses than the geographic tomorrow afternoon, for eight "Big Ten" teams clash in the opening contests for the championship of the western conference.

A powerful Buckeye eleven, eager to avenge last season's defeat at the hands of Northwestern, is in town for a final workout at Dyche stadium on the eve of its engagement with the Wild Cats, while a confident squad of 40 Iowa collegians was due this morning to prepare for the game with Chicago at Stagg Field.

Indiana had a squad of 32 players at Ann Arbor making ready for Michigan, while Purdue's boiler-makers have gone north to meet Minnesota.

But while "Big Ten" football fans will follow the fortunes of their favorites on four conference battlefields tomorrow, the big show of the day takes place at Soldiers' Field.

Piquancy is lent to tomorrow's encounter between Notre Dame and Navy by the fact that both have been defeated already. The gamblers have established the odds which favor the "Irish," but in reality the outcome is a toss-up.

Head Coach Bill Ingram will send an experienced eleven into action. As for Rockne, he may start a couple of assistant managers and his water boys, for all anyone knows.

"My minute men," the derisive Dane describes his second eleven of 1927 which has become in a large measure his first team of 1928.

"It used to take our opponents about a minute to score on that second team whenever I started it," explained Rockne with a chuckle.

As a matter of fact, Notre Dame is nobody's soft spot this season, despite the 22 to 6 defeat at the hands of the Wisconsin eleven last Saturday.

It's hard to teach the old Dane losing ways, and there is more than one good reason for believing that the Notre Dame coach is secretly hoping his team will snap out of its slump and spring a big surprise at the expense of the Middles tomorrow.

Allowing for Rockne's little jokes in the matter of starting teams, the line-up will be:

Navy—Beans, 1c; Wilson, 1c; Burke (c), 1c; Hardin, c; Eddy, rg; Giess, rt; McRet, re; Welchel, qb; Castree, lb; H. Bauer, rlb; Clifton, fb.

Notre Dame—Colerick, 1c; Miller (c), 1c; Leppig, 1c; Moynihan, c; Cannon, rg; Ransavage, rt; Vezio, re; Brady, qb; Chevigny, lb; Niemiec, rlb; Dew, fb.

Officials—Referee, Eckersall umpire, Coffin, Cornell; field judge, Hackett, West Point; head linesman, Gardner, Cornell.

GEESE FLY OVER 80 MILES AN HOUR, DEFINITELY PROVED

Minneapolis, Oct. 12. — (UP)—The question of how fast geese can fly has been solved, according to Gene Shank, Minneapolis flier and one time holder of the world's loop-the-loop record.

Flying a plane with a speed of 80 miles an hour, Shank was unable to pass a flock of geese on their annual northward journey. After watching the Canadian honkers fly over his commercial flying field for several days, the aviator set out in hot pursuit in a training ship.

Although unable to keep up with the birds he tired them out and the flock alighted on a lake after a 20-minute chase.

No definite offer has yet been made direct to Johnson, the former star said. His trip to New York is primarily to return to his family after a visit with his parents in Kansas. He probably will see both Griffith and Block shortly after his arrival, he said.

The Big Issue

After all, the big issue, this year as always, is a continuance of the prosperous conditions which have made the United States the envy and the marvel of the world.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Like Father—Like Son

By QUIN HALL
IT'S really remarkable how few of the really great baseball players have sons who follow in their footsteps.

An iceman's son may learn the intricate handling of the ice tongs and become another iceman to take the weight of hundred-pound cakes off the shoulders of the old man when he gets ready to retire. A banker may rear his toothless offspring up to be another banker, and it's natural for a doctor's son to take up the saving and hacking business when he grows up. But what becomes of the male offspring of left-handed pitchers and baseball players in general? Or do they have sons? We haven't heard of many.

This question is one of those interesting sidelights on the national pastime. Back in 1907 the Chicago White Sox had a star pitcher. He was with the Sox prior to that time, but it was in 1907 that he reached the pinnacle of fame by winning 40 victories out of 55 games pitched. That's what one would refer to nowadays as establishing a reputation on the hill. It was a reputation even back in 1907, and is one which will probably be remembered forever in baseball. That finger's name was Ed Walsh.

Aside from making a remarkable record for himself "Big Ed" loved kids and he spent many mornings at the White Sox park in Chicago teaching the youngsters the fine points of the game. When his overworked arm gave out and he was no longer able to accept a steady pitching assignment he found a new pupil. It was his son.

Early in his life Young Ed started in shine in athletics. At St. John's Prep School in Danvers, Mass., he took an active part in football, basketball and baseball. Following this he matriculated at Notre Dame where his father was the baseball coach and soon became one of the best of the college twirlers.

Young Ed didn't waste any time in getting from the classrooms to the big leagues and it was natural for him to sign up with the same team on which his dad had made his reputation. Natural, especially in view of the fact that his dad is now coaching the White Sox pitchers.

Despite the fact that few sons of noted fathers have made good on the diamond, the fans who perch around the White Sox park are all pulling for the youngster and hoping that he has the goods. And thousands of fans elsewhere are hoping so, too.

A banker may rear his toothless offspring up to be another banker, and it's natural for a doctor's son to take up the sawing and hacking business when he grows up. But what becomes of the male offspring of left-handed pitchers and baseball players in general? Or do they have sons? We haven't heard of many.

This question is one of those interesting sidelights on the national pastime.

Back in 1907 the Chicago White Sox had a star pitcher. He was with the Sox prior to that time, but it was in 1907 that he reached the pinnacle of fame by winning 40 victories out of 55 games pitched. That's what one would refer to nowadays as establishing a reputation on the hill. It was a reputation even back in 1907, and is one which will probably be remembered forever in baseball.

That finger's name was Ed Walsh.

Aside from making a remarkable record for himself "Big Ed" loved kids and he spent many mornings at the White Sox park in Chicago teaching the youngsters the fine points of the game. When his overworked arm gave out and he was no longer able to accept a steady pitching assignment he found a new pupil. It was his son.

Early in his life Young Ed started in shine in athletics. At St. John's Prep School in Danvers, Mass., he took an active part in football, basketball and baseball. Following this he matriculated at Notre Dame where his father was the baseball coach and soon became one of the best of the college twirlers.

Young Ed didn't waste any time in getting from the classrooms to the big leagues and it was natural for him to sign up with the same team on which his dad had made his reputation.

So a few weeks ago the fans had an opportunity to see a sight which seldom, if ever, has been duplicated in major league history. A father—a famous pitcher in his own right some twenty years ago—sitting on the bench to coach his son between innings.

In the starts he has made during the past season young Ed looks like a real prospect. He undoubtedly needs additional coaching and experience. It is a certainty that he will get additional coaching during the coming winter with a capable coach living in the same house with him.

It is still too early to say just exactly how good Young Ed will be—how nearly he will approximate the reputation of "Big Ed." Right now he seems to have a lot of stuff on the ball and if coaching will make him better, he will surely report for training next spring a much improved youngster.

Despite the fact that few sons of noted fathers have made good on the diamond, the fans who perch around the White Sox park are all pulling for the youngster and hoping that he has the goods. And thousands of fans elsewhere are hoping so, too.

ELECTION BOARDS MEET OCT. 30

Voters Whose Names Are Not on List May Register Them But Not Required to Do So.

MEET AT POLLING PLACES

No Registrations Required Before Election Time in Cities of Fourth Class

Legal voters whose names are not included in the lists published in the various precincts are not required to register before election day, November 6, but may do so if desired when the election boards meet at their respective polling places on October 30.

The election boards will meet on October 30 to check over the list of electors, add names of qualified voters of their knowledge and take from the lists such names as are known to them as non voters who include deceased voters and others who have moved from the precinct.

The general election laws of the state of Minnesota embracing these respects follow:

"Registration of voters not required in cities of fourth class—That in all cities of the fourth class in the state of Minnesota operating under home rule charters, in which said charters there is no express provision made for holding a registration day or days for voters prior to the annual charter election, there shall not be any registration day or days for voters prior to such election."

"Cities of the fourth class—In cities of the fourth class the board shall meet on the Tuesday preceding such election at the place where the same is to be held, and remain in session from 9 o'clock a. m. until 9 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of making corrections in such lists, the time and place of meeting to be noted on the list previously posted. AULGER BROTHERS

Stock Company Opens Week Engagement at Park Theatre October 15

Announcement is made of the appearance of the Aulger Brothers Stock Company at the Ney Park theatre. Opening their engagement Monday night, October 15, they will present one of the latest Broadway releases, entitled "The Town Toppers" a comedy by George M. Cohan. For his principal characters Mr. Cohan reaches with one hand to South Bend, picking P. H. Bancroft, and with the other he gathers in "Vic" Arnold, middle aged New Yorker of wealth. P. H. and Vic were pals and friends 25 years ago, back in South Bend, but "Vic" left for the metropolis to seek his fortune. The play opens up with the arrival of P. H. and his wife on the eve of his pal's wedding. They have been apart for 25 years, and P. H. who has his friends interests sincerely at heart, decides to look out for him to the limit of his ability. He becomes suspicious that the marriage is but a crooked game on the part of the prospective in-laws to rob his friend of the fortune he has amassed. How P. H. gums up the machinery, and then how, on seeing his error, he straightens things out again, makes up the basis of this wonderful comedy. "The Town Toppers" affords exceptional parts for the entire cast, and especially for Louise Sherwood, Harrison Aulger and John Caylor. In the character of P. H. Bancroft, there is a wonderful chance for Harrison Aulger to do his best work.

There are 16 people with the Aulger Brothers Stock Company, including their own concert orchestra of eight pieces. They carry all special scenery for each and every play, also lighting equipment necessary for a complete production.

Members of the cast include Addison and Harrison Aulger, Louise Sherwood, Dewey Campbell, John Caylor, Myra Jefferson, Flo Murray, Chance Corbin, Gladys Bell, T. V. Brown, John Conway, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Fitzgibbons and Tony Tretter. The plays to be produced during their engagement here are: "The Town Toppers," "New Brooms," "Our Children," "Married and How," "Pigs," "Sainted Hypocrites and Honest Sinners," and "In Love With Love." The vaudeville between acts is classy and of a much higher standard than that usually seen with repertoire companies.

FORMER SENATOR ENDORSES SARGON

Hon. Thos. W. Hardwick, U. S. Senator for Six Years, Says Sargon Overcame Troubles of Many Years' Standing

Sargon is rapidly becoming a household word throughout America. Thousands of grateful men and women from all walks of life have been lifted out of the throes of lost vitality, suffering, misery and ill-health by its use.

In relating his experience with this famous medicine, United States Senator Thomas W. Hardwick, who served his state for six years in the Upper House of Congress, and who was later elected Governor of Georgia, said:

"I had lost most of my old-time energy and both mental and physical fatigue came more quickly than formerly. Constipation especially had troubled me for the past ten years and I had become accustomed to dosing myself with some physic or laxative every few days. My appetite was not keen and my meals did not seem to agree with me as they should. Sometimes I would feel positively wretched for days at a time. Sargon was highly recommended to me and I decided to try it."

"The medicine helped me from the very first. It gave me a splendid appetite. I don't know when I have enjoyed my meals more than I do now. I eat with more relish and experience no ill or uncomfortable after-effects whatever. Naturally my capacity for work has increased. I feel more efficient. I have more energy. In fact, I feel that I am in better health than it has been my pleasure to enjoy in many years, but most important of all, I no longer find it necessary to continually take laxatives and cathartics."

"I also took the Sargon Pills with fine results and consider them a valuable part of the treatment. "I take pleasure in endorsing Sargon for the genuine improvement that it has brought about in my physical condition."

Sargon may be obtained in Brainerd from Henry P. Dunn; and in Pequot from A. S. Rasmussen. Adv

CROSS-FLOW RADIATOR

In the cross-flow radiator water from the engine enters the inlet tank at the right, flows horizontally through the core and is pumped from the outlet tank at the left back to the engine. The thermostat controlling the water temperature is shown in the circle.

The cross-flow radiators in the cooling systems of the Pontiac Six and the Oakland All-American Six reduce to a minimum the evaporation of water and alcohol. An automatic thermostat prevents water circulation until the engine reaches correct operating temperature. As a consequence the engine warms up quickly and less choking is needed, reducing dilution of crankcase oil.

Because of the protection the cross-flow radiator provides against losses of water

DEATH TRAIL ENDS AT GALLOWS

Interesting study of Charles Shader, whose long career as a murderer in Chicago, has ended with his own death by hanging at the hands of the law. In 1921, Shader, then a youth, killed his father and was exonerated on the plea that he fired shots defending his mother; in 1922 he and a companion killed a policeman and Shader was sentenced to life imprisonment; in 1926 he and six other convicts killed a deputy warden in an escape; he was captured and sentenced to hang, he escaped a second time, was recaptured and finally paid with his life on the rope.

FOUND GUILTY OF TRYING TO DYNAMITE WOMAN'S APARTMENT

Benidji, Minn., Oct. 12.—(UP)—(UP)—John W. Wilcox, 50, prosperous real estate agent, yesterday was found guilty of attempting to dynamite the apartment of Miss Myrtle Hollowell, his 28-year-old paramour, and was sentenced to from five to 10 years in Stillwater penitentiary.

The jury which heard the case of the father of grown children retired Wednesday night and returned a verdict of guilty after 12 hours' deliberation.

Judge B. F. Wright pronounced the sentence on Wilcox yesterday morning.

Testimony presented by the state apparently proved that it was Wilcox who on August 20 tied dynamite to a long pole and raised it to the window of the woman with whom he had carried on a love affair for 11 years.

Miss Hollowell, clerk of municipal court here, testified that Wilcox had become jealous of attentions paid her by other men and made a scene when she informed him that their affair was over.

The defendant's wife attempted to establish an alibi for Wilcox when she testified that she and her husband were together on the night of the explosion.

Wilcox is expected to be taken to Stillwater early next week.

DEATH TRAIL ENDS AT GALLOWS

Interesting study of Charles Shadr, whose long career as a murderer in Chicago, has ended with his own death by hanging at the hands of the law. In 1921, Shadr, then a youth, killed his father and was exonerated on the plea that he fired shots defending his mother; in 1922 he and a companion killed a policeman and Shadr was sentenced to life imprisonment; in 1926 he and six other convicts killed a deputy warden in an escape; he was captured, sentenced to hang, he escaped a second time, was recaptured and finally paid with his life on the rope.

CHAMBERLIN ON WAY TO BERLIN

Le Bourget Field, Oct. 12.—(UP)—Clarence Chamberlin, who took off in his amphibian plane from the side of the Leviathan at Cherbourg at 7 A. M., arrived at Le Bourget field at 11:30 A. M. today.

He will return here and proceed to Berlin.

An Amazing Success
Feen-a-mint
The Chewing LAXATIVE

Chew It Like Chewing Gum
A pleasure to use. Very efficient. Children love it. No taste but that of sweet mint. The most popular laxative because it's a "satisfier." 15c and 25c.

The trans-Atlantic aviator was forced mostly through rain en route from Cherbourg to Le Bourget.

He was forced to descend one on the Seine at Sartroville, just outside Paris, and wait two hours for the weather to clear.
